

Linda Miller, BSC, OT, MEDes
President

Before establishing EWI in 1991, Linda was an ergonomist with the Worker's Compensation Board (WCB) in Edmonton, Alberta and also worked at the Calgary General Hospital as an occupational therapist. With her Master's Degree in Environmental Design, she developed expertise in design reviews and assessments in various stages of forestry, mining, oil and gas industries. Currently, Linda is working with builders and architects in residential construction, with a particular focus on active adult living complexes as well as living spaces for the elderly and those with physical disabilities. In order to fully understand the field of residential construction, Linda is studying to achieve Master Home Builder status with the Professional Home Builder's Institute of Alberta and is also taking safety courses through the Alberta Construction Safety Association. Additionally, Linda teaches ergonomic courses and remains actively involved with the Canadian College for the Certification of Professional Ergonomists.

Despite this busy schedule, Linda believes in taking time out for family life and leisurely activities. She has an avid interest in photography, applying a keen eye for detail to her creative side, and also has a passion for cooking, with a particular talent for a good salmon bake. Linda also enjoys keeping physically fit, but her favorite diversion is good old-fashioned family fun with her two children.

Linda's professional memberships include: Alberta Association of Registered Occupational Therapists; Canadian Association of Occupational Therapists; Association of Canadian Ergonomics; and Human Factors and Ergonomics Society in the United States. Linda is also a Canadian Certified Professional Ergonomist and holds American certification with the Board of Certified Professional Ergonomists. In the area of construction, Linda has a membership with the Edmonton Region Home Builder's Association.
